vulnerable groups like tribes; women, children, minorities etc. have not in a position to un-reach their rights and entitlements even after 60 years of Independence in India. Most of these people have economically poor and still exists below poverty line. Comparatively the socio-economic conditions have declining in the target havea in day by day. The schedule casts, schedule tribes and other backward class of the population of the children and women have discriminated in many ways and exploited. The existing resources - social, human, economic and natural have exploited. Enhancing the quality of life of poor in urban, rural and tribal contexts is very important. Poor have the most hit populations in village, especially the women and children have the worst effected due to the changing climatic and economic situations. A special attention is required to safeguard/protect the women and children from the deleterious effects of the changing scenarios.

GDPs of the nations have increasing due to the globalization phenomenon, but the fruits of the economic developments have not reached to the poor. The Government is the biggest donor, has the major responsibility to take care of the welfare of the poor in the country. Due to red-tapism and bureaucracy coupled with inefficacy in the implementation of existing programmes, poor have not able to access the government support. Looking at the above scenario, SAMIDA was initiated by likeminded professionals from different walks of life to bring in change in the attitudes of governments, to provide required direct and indirect support to the vulnerable communities in rural, urban and tribal contexts. We thrive for the just, equity and equality for the vulnerable section of the communities. Our major focuses have Health, Education and improve the livelihoods to the target community in all sectors. SAMIDA with the support of Deccan Development Society & Ministry of Environment and forests has been implementing the project “National Environmental Awareness Campaign (NEAC-2014-15)” and under this the theme of this reporting period is “Combating Desertification, Land Degradation and Drought” projects and during the period 2014-15 has witnessed progression in the promotion of NPM practices to augment efforts for reducing the drought and desertification and land degradation through promoting the awareness, entitlements, rights, education, tools, and advanced inputs through activation of people participation and community ownership. The context is to reduce the natural degradation as a result of indiscriminate bore wells, food security scarcity, forest cover spoilage and unwarranted desertification and as a consequence of this loss of fauna and flora and fertility loss to the land and so on and so forth wastage of natural resources.

Majority of aspects of the previous phase are in implementation stage and identical methods in a constant pace over this year have accomplished design of and so far have met with moderate success, mostly failing on extracting the community advanced motivation. We are in this process accomplishments are making the communities to assess losses to the environment, execution of enactments, facilitation of farmers and key players to excel in the fronts of environment orientation and establishing the linkages with other departments of agriculture, education, RWS, schools and youth clubs. The community processes have enabled the project villages to monitor functioning and sensitization and grass root involvement of different stake holders.
